National Emergency Management Organisation (NEMO) Annual Report 2003/04

Critical Incident Stress Management & Debriefing (Level 2) Course Report

Prepared for NEMO (Saint Lucia)

By

Dr. Davendra Sharma

Purpose

The advanced training program in critical incident stress management and debriefing was organized by the National Emergency Management Office (NEMO) of Saint Lucia as part of the Emergency Recovery and Disaster project in order to effectively deal with possible disruptive distress caused by critical incidents and to prevent post traumatic stress reactions in primary, secondary and tertiary victims of any critical incident.

Background

Acute stress reactions, adjustment disorders, prolonged grief, childhood disorders including conduct disorders, substance abuse and acute and chronic post traumatic disorders are significant problems which may ensue from any critical incident where the normal coping mechanism of the survivor is overwhelmed by the incident. These reactions are not limited to the primary victim but may occur in the first responders, the secondary victim and also in the families of trauma workers, the tertiary victims. The impact with respect to the loss of time from work, impaired work function, liability to poor judgment, avoidant behavior and substance abuse are unfortunate costly consequences.

Critical incidents include: Natural disasters such as hurricanes, volcanoes, earthquakes, tidal waves, flooding. Accidents such as an aviation disaster, chemical accidents, oil spills and others such as bomb threats, fires and acts of terrorism.

Individuals with training in Critical Incident Stress management including training in defusing and debriefing are recognized as essential to providing adequate support in managing and preventing post traumatic stress reactions.

Aim of the course

The course aimed to further train individuals with previous knowledge of stress management interested in providing services in the area of advanced post traumatic stress management including critical incident stress defusing and debriefing.

Scope of the service

General: Provide a four day training package in Stress Management in Disasters including training in Critical Incident Defusing and Debriefing.

Methods

The workshop participants were:

Educated on the theory of post trauma presentations and stress related disorders by Power Point presentations and video tapes of post trauma reactions in adults and children. Participants were informed of the reactions in the primary, secondary and tertiary victims and shown slides of the different victims and their responses.

Participants were provided methods to evaluate and detect post traumatic stress disorders including the severity of the impact by use of the post impact questionnaire. Also taught how to use questionnaires to detect problems in children, anxiety and depression and substance abuse disorders.

Participants were trained in multi modal techniques of post trauma stress management, including understanding the type of intervention to apply to different situations. Participants were given the opportunity to role play their communication and crisis intervention skills in a variety of post trauma stress situations including anger management, grief management and conflict resolution. These were video taped and interview techniques and counseling skills previously taught by power point presentations, were reviewed and critiqued.

Participants gained competency practice in the skill of defusing and debriefing by observing a video taped defusing session.

Discussion of the role of the CISD worker was done and included the importance of health education in the area of post traumatic stress disorders to be done in the workplace, in the school and for the general public.

Course materials:

Each participant was given a handbook containing resource materials for reference. They were also given clinical cases, questionnaires and assessment tools and handouts of each of the power point lectures.

Course Evaluation

Evaluation of the participant was done by means of an end of workshop examination. Also by direct feedback on performance and participation during the workshop.

Eleven of the twelve participants successfully met the end of completion requirements and were awarded the level 2 CISD certificate.

The workshop was evaluated by an end of workshop questionnaires to be filled in by each participant. This was given to the Director of NEMO for analysis.

Recommendations

The CISM counselors would meet on a quarterly basis to:

- To review and familiarize themselves with the protocols of the Saint Lucia Stress Response Team.
- A coordinator, for the CISM team, Mr. Hilary Bynoe was elected and would liaise closely with the Chairman of the Stress Response Team and the Director of NEMO.
- At the quarterly team meeting, the team would plan and conduct simulation exercises of crisis interventions, defusing and debriefings.
- Plan public education exercises to inform of the stress effects of critical incidents.
- Make recommendations to NEMO for the training of all first responders in the level 1 SMID program.
- Make recommendations to the chairperson of the Stress Response Team and Director of NEMO for education of senior managers of the role of the CISM team and the benefits to personnel of applying Critical Incident Stress Demobilization, Defusing and Debriefing for work teams involved in a critical incident.
- Director of NEMO to ensure that arrangements are made for release to conduct Critical Incident Defusing and debriefings as may be required after any incident.
- Director of NEMO to make recommendations for further continuing and advanced training of team members.
- Director of NEMO to arrange for suitable identification cards or badges for team members.

- Provision of secretarial and other support services

The NEMO will also facilitate access to the Trainer to reports, documents and other pertinent information relevant to the services to be undertaken by the Trainer.

NEMO Support

The Consultant acknowledges the logistical support and backstopping provided by Ms. Dawn French, Director of NEMO and Ms Maria Mombelli, Office Manager. Nine (9) two-day workshops were held over a period of five weeks. During that period the NEMO office was required to produce training materials and compact disks for over 100 participants.

The materials were always ready for the consultant to collect. Their hard work and conscientious execution of the tasks went a long way to making this training programme a success.

Constraints

Level of computer proficiency of participants

The level of computer literacy varied. While there were no computer illiterates there were people with “user” knowledge who had to be instructed in operations such as deleting folders, formatting disks etc.

Functioning of computers at Computer lab

Of the 30 computers in Lab 1 at SALCC on 12 had functioning CD and floppy drives, both a necessity of SUMA training

Number of participants

The number of participants invited to the training was 30. On average, 10 – 14 people attended. There were only a few people directly involved in warehouse functions and some institutions that would have benefited from this training did not attend, such as police services and prison services.

Punctuality of participants

The punctuality of participants varied greatly and this made formal instruction difficult to coordinate. The trainer chose to have participants work independently using the training manual and to work individually with the participants who needed assistance to get over a learning hurdle. This method worked well and allowed advanced students to complete the course work at their own pace. Learning moments were taken advantaged on the individual level.

Recommendations

National SUMA TEAM

A number of participants were identified who were willing to participate on the National SUMA team. These individuals are indicated on the attendance list in Appendix B. 96 individuals were trained in SUMA. While most have the competency to assist, 19 have indicated a willingness to serve on the national team and more importantly shown a high level of ability in operations.

Use of SUMA Warehouse module in everyday use

A number of individuals with stock management responsibilities indicated that they were interested in using SUMA as a tool to coordinate their stock management.

The list of those individuals are contained in Appendix C. Efforts should be made to access funding to provide consultancy services to assist in the adaptation and implementation of SUMA into those warehouse situations.

Logos II Sails Caribbean Sea for Final Time

THE MV Logos II is on the verge of passing the baton to a sister vessel- the Logos Hope, bringing an end to years of much anticipated visits to the Ports of Castries and Vieux Fort by the ship deemed to be the largest floating book fair. Frans Pieter Van Veen Project Manager for the Logos II says the possibility of obtaining a new ship was proposed a few years ago.

“We have been struggling with the facilities on the Logos II and for a few years now, we have been trying to put a project together to replace the Logos II. Three months ago we purchased a new ship, the Logos Hope so the Logos II will make its final visit to the St. Lucia and the Caribbean as well.”

However the mandate of the Logos II will be continued by the newer vessel which will boast modern facilities including the addition of a new information technology component to its vast cadre of publications.

“Indeed we will dedicate a special part of the ship to books that are for persons at university level and many of those books are academic in nature. We get the books Psychology and more of our main publishers and we will give them away in exchange for a small contribution,”

The Logos II will be berthed at Pointe Seraphine from June 30th to July 19th, 2004.

Risk Analysis and Food Safety Conference to look at Imported Products

In an effort to uphold the level of vigilance and monitoring required on the part of authorities charged to ensure that the potential risks associated to foods and meat products remain minimal, a sensitization meeting focussing on international and local trade regulations and the implications such as contamination of food products will be the main focus of a five day food safety workshop.

Organised by the Ministry of Health, Human Services, Family Affairs and Gender Relations in collaboration with the Pan American Health Organisation, the workshop will comprise representatives from various Caricom territories in the Health, Agriculture and Manufacturing sectors. Acting Senior Environmental Health Officer Parker Ragnanan explains that they key players must have accurate information in their possession so that they can protect the public's welfare.

“You would be required as a country involved in trade, to provide information on the foods that you trade with, it means therefore that you will have to provide accurate information, you'd also be able to facilities trade via certification, also a country has the welfare of its people and therefore we must be in a position to monitor the products that are imported into St. Lucia.

Mr. Ragnanan says the importance of Risk Analysis in Food Safety is clearly underscored in light of outbreaks of diseases such as Bird flu and Mad Cow Disease, which cause a direct impact on international trade and has raised serious health concerns.

Resource persons from the Tuskegee University, USA, the University of the West Indies, the US Department of Agriculture and the Pan American Health Organization will instruct participants on a multiplicity of pertinent issues.

The PAHO funded workshop will be coordinated by Mr. Lloyd Webb and commences on Monday 7th June at the Bay Gardens Hotel.

Minister calls for Higher Profile for Environmental Issues

A reminder to the nation that the sea is a priceless resource for survival with direct linkages to several important industries in St. Lucia, has been reiterated by Honourable Ferguson John, Minister for Physical Development, Environment and Housing. He further emphasized the need for environmental issues to be accorded a much higher profile by all sectors, so that members of the public can better appreciate the value and significance of coastal waters as a source of environmental sustainability and as a generator of economic activity. The Minister noted that in the local context of economic activity, the sea, beaches and coastal waters should be even more cherished.

“The theme for World Environment Day is “Oceans and seas – Wanted Dead or Alive? This theme has special significance for St. Lucia since many of our economic activities whether they be tourism, fishing or maritime transportation depend directly on the state of our coastal and marine environment.”

The Minister noted that even land-based practices such as littering impacts seriously on coral reefs or bring about a decline in the quantity of fish available to the fishing industry.

“ The debris, waste and sediment that are now strewn along our coastline as a result of the recent unseasonable rains can be attributed to littering and illegal waste disposal, deforestation and poor land use management practices including lack of sediment control measures for construction,” remarked minister John.

In his address marking World Environment Day observed which will be observed on Saturday June 5th, Honourable John also called for environmental management to be seen as a more integral component of sustainable development.

St. Lucia Police Given Responsibility for Port Security

GOVERNMENT has appointed the Royal St. Lucia Police Force as the lead agency responsible for ensuring that all the seaports on the island comply with all the newly implemented International Ship and Port Security Code required for port facilities and vessels operating worldwide.

Director of Maritime Affairs at the St. Lucia Air and Seaports Authority (SLASPA), Dermot Saltibus, says the security code is a set of guidelines, developed by the International Community through an amendment of the International Convention for the safety of life at sea, known as the SOLAS Convention.

According to Mr. Saltibus, the designated authority, the Royal St. Lucia Police Force will be fully responsible to enforce the regulations that mandate compliance with the SOLAS Convention.

The compliance procedure involved completion and approval of assessment for the various port facilities, Mr. Saltibus said. He added that SLASPA had developed port facility security plans that were to be approved by the designated authority. Among the plans being finalised, are a series of training programmes for port facility operators and the need to appoint port facility security officers.

Mr. Saltibus warned that the consequence of non compliance of this security code could be catastrophic to St. Lucia, as well as the rest of the OECS countries. “What that means is, if a country does not comply and a vessel, which visits such a country intend to proceed to, for example, a port in the United States, the US Maritime Agency, has indicated that such a vessel will be denied access”, Mr. Saltibus explained.

These measures were spearheaded by the United States Government, following the 9- 11 incident. Implementation of the International Ship and Port Security Code comes into effect on July 1, 2004.
