THE public is hereby advised that effective May 11, 2010, the Registrar of Insurance has intervened into the St. Lucia operations of CLICO International Life Insurance Limited and directed the company to refrain from:

effecting any contracts of insurance generally whether or not the effecting of the contract falls within a class of insurance business which the company is authorized to carry on and

varying any existing contracts of insurance

The objective of this action, which was influenced by (i) the unreasonably delays in the settlement of claims under policies issued by the company and (ii) a directive issued to the company by its home regulator in Barbados to stop issuing new policies, is the protection of policyholders in St. Lucia.

This directive applies both to the issuance of new policies and the varying of existing policies but will otherwise have no effect on the general operations of the company and on the servicing of existing policies or its obligations to existing liabilities.

This action does not apply to CLICO International General Insurance Company which does business in property; marine; liability and motor vehicle insurance.

The Registrar of Insurance has been reliably informed that the sale of CLICO International General Insurance Company to a regional insurance company is at an advanced stage.

In other news, the Board of Directors of GraceKennedy Limited has approved an increase in dividend payments to a minimum of 15% of Net Profit attributable to stockholders, up from 10%. A decision was also taken to increase the frequency of dividend payments from 2 to 3 times yearly. Subsequent payments will be made in September and December 2010.

TRINIDAD

Over in Trinidad, market indices posted mixed results as overall market activity picked up from last week. Over 2.7 million units of stock traded valued at nearly TT$60 million. Of the 20 shares traded, 5 advanced, 5 declined while 10 traded firm. Capital and Credit Financial Group Limited emerged volume leader with over 21% of the activity followed by Scotiabank, Trinidad & Tobago and GraceKennedy Limited combining for an additional 30%.

JAMAICA

On the Jamaica Stock Exchange market indices fell as both volume and value of shares traded last week declined significantly. The advance decline ratio was 16 to 14 with 7 shares holding firm. INTERNATIONAL

On the international front, U.S. stocks rose on the final day of trading, rebounding from the market's biggest drop in a year, as investors speculated equities may have fallen too much during the week on concern about Europe's debt crisis.

And finally in currencies news, the Euro rose the most in eight months against the dollar amid speculation traders who bet on its decline amid Europe's sovereign-debt crisis had to buy back the currency as it strengthened to a one-week high.

A new 12-inch Apple MacBook

Would another 12-inch MacBook work? Who knows? But it would fit neatly into Apple's current lineup.

Never, ever would I presume to have a better idea than the marketing and design geniuses at Apple, but let me throw this out there anyway. With the MacBook bottoming out at a 13.3-inch screen size and the iPad at about 10 inches, a 12-inch ultraportable would find a niche at Apple.

I can hear Apple designers bristling at the idea already: 12-inch form factors are so passe! Too small! 13.3 inches is the perfect combination of portability and size!

But wait a minute. With today's materials and silicon technology, 12-inch laptops lend themselves to the next grail of laptop portability: less than 2 pounds. With Apple's knack for trend-setting designs, I can envision a 1.5-pound, razor-thin (under 0.7 inches) MacBook that showcases Apple's design prowess.

Of course, it would be priced well above the iPad to avoid any hint of direct competition. But think of the possibilities: a special ultra-low-power Intel processor (Apple and Intel would need to bring down the thermals--the heat generated by the processor--a bit, even below Intel's newest power-efficient processors).

Or, as possibly a better option, imagine this: Take the iPad's basic internals, add a next-generation dual-core Apple A4 processor, tack on a built-in keyboard, and, presto, a very unique clamshell laptop not beholden to Intel (which, I'm sure, is fine with Apple). And Apple could architect an enhanced iPad-style operating system. (With Flash support this time, please.)

The 12-inch Apple iBook G4. Worth an update?

Of course, there have been a raft of decent 12-inch (and smaller) laptops in the past from companies like Toshiba, Sony, and Hewlett-Packard. Sony sells the 1.5 pound Vaio X series, and HP has continued to update its popular EliteBook ultraportable line with the 12-inch 2540p. But the Sony design is based on a sluggish Intel Atom processor running an overburdensome Windows 7 operating system. And the HP design is more of a buttoned-down business notebook.

Apple could bring some real panache to the ultraportable laptop market (again), which, I would argue, is getting stale. Would you buy one?

Shakib confirms fixing approach

Shakib Al Hasan confirmed he was approached by someone wanting information

Bangladesh's captain, Shakib Al Hasan, has confirmed he received an approach from an unknown person whom he believed wanted him to manipulate the result of a one-day international against Ireland.

The incident is believed to have taken place in Dhaka in March 2008, and involved a brief phonecall on the eve of an ODI series against Ireland in which Shakib, who was not captain at the time, was offered "sponsorship" in return for his under-performance.

In accordance with the strict guidelines of the ICC's anti-corruption and security unit, Shakib immediately reported the approach to an Bangladesh Cricket Board official and to Colonel Qaza Noor, the ASCU's regional manager, and never heard from the caller again. Bangladesh had been expected to win the contest, and duly did, by a comfortable 3-0 margin.

"It was a long time ago, probably two-and-a-half years ago, in our home conditions against Ireland," Shakib said on the eve of the first Test against England at Lord's. "I didn't talk to him much because we had a team meeting to go to, so I told him 'I'll talk to you later' and immediately told a member of the board and the ICC guy.

They took action and after that he never called me again." Shakib's revelations come on the same day that the Daily Telegraph revealed that a senior county cricketer was asked to "name his price" to fix the result of televised one-day matches in English domestic cricket, and confirm the fears of the outgoing head of the ASCU, Lord Condon, that the threat of match fixing will never be entirely stamped out, and that it could "spread like a rash" if the game's players and administrators relax their vigilance.

"Cricket probably has the strongest anti-corruption code for players and support staff of any international sport," said Condon. "The modern generation of players know that if they bet on games, underperform for fixing, or even if they don't report an approach that is a disciplinary offence in itself. If we have due reason we can ask for their phone records, and they have to provide them.

"We introduced an education programme so that anyone who wanted to play international cricket had to go through a programme that raised their awareness of who the fixers were, how they fixed, and how they groomed players. That has been very well thought out and very useful, because we now have a generation of players who are supportive of what we are trying to do, and aware of how the fixers operate. They are the providers of the most important intelligence that we get."

Shakib added that the exact nature of the deal that the phone-caller was proposing was never fully revealed. "We didn't have time to discuss all the things, and what I should do," he said. "I took the phone, and from the way he was talking, I thought he might do something, so I told someone. He never exactly told me he wanted me to fix a match, he just told me he wanted to be my sponsor.

"I can't speak for anyone else, but as far as I'm concerned my head wasn't turned at that time," he added. "What I feel is I do not care about the money. I want to play for my country, because that is a great pride for me, and I want to continue to do well for my country. As far as my family is concerned we are settled enough to lead our lives, so I am not concerned about those monies. If I play well for the next ten years, the money will come and I won't have to worry about it."

England's captain, Andrew Strauss, said: "I've never heard or had any reason to suspect that a game I've played in has been fixed in any way. If it is happening, it needs to be stamped out straight away. There's no place for it in any form of cricket, and we've got a duty as players to make sure that if we hear of it, or are approached by someone, we come forward and report it straight away. "It's the only way of ironing it out. For players to be tempted by taking money is ludicrous in my mind. The authorities are doing everything they can, but there is a huge responsibility on the players to make sure it doesn't take hold and spread."

Historical Focus

Extracted from a book entitled St. Lucia: The romance of its place names (1966) by Rev. C. Jesse, FMI, MBE

Father Charles Jesse (1897-1985) was born in Dorset, England. He arrived in St. Lucia in 1928 and made significant contributions to the country, for example he wrote the lyrics of the national anthem.

COMMUNITIES/DISTRICTS OF SAINT LUCIA

GOVERNMENT HOUSE

Saint Lucia's present Government House is situated on a terrace in the foreground of the western end of Morne Fortuné. It is about 1 mile from Castries at an altitude of 437 feet. The building was completed in November, 1895. Before its construction, the residence of the officer administering the Government in Saint Lucia was situated at the western extremity of Morne Fortuné, some 300 feet higher up. It was then called the Pavilion—at least by the British sometime after their take-over of the island in 1814.

The early French Governors are thought to have resided on the site of the Pavilion, or thereabouts, since 1768 or so. However, the dreadful hurricane of 1817 blew down the Pavilion and buried the Governor and others in its ruins. The Pavilion was rebuilt in 1819. Breen says that the Pavilion used to have a bad reputation from the health point of view.

GRAND RIVIERE

Two districts in St. Lucia are called Grand Riviere today. One is in the Gros Islet Quarter; the other in the Dennery Quarter. The name, of course, signifies big river or stream. If the spelling grand is authentic, one may point out that grand, long ago, was used for both masculine and feminine gender.

HALF-MOON BATTERY

Breen says that the entrance to Port Castries was guarded in his days “on the south by the Tapion and Half-moon Batteries and on the north by the Vigie.” Just inside Castries Harbour, the Half-moon guns occupied an important position. Judging by the British plan of the 1778-1779 campaign in St. Lucia, there were 5 guns there then. Three of them were 18 pounders and two were 24 pounders. One of the latter could fire across the neck of the Vigie peninsula at a vessel in the Choc Bay.

On that occasion, the British seized the Half-moon battery and used it to fire on the French under d'Estang, as he attempted to retake the island. The French would appear to have called it batterie du figuier - Fig Tree Battery.

HEWANORRA

This is not a place-name in St. Lucia, but an Amerindian name for the island. It is found in a copy of the deed by which certain Caribs (Indian Warner and others) sold St. Lucia to some British people (presumably from Barbados) in 1663. The sale was a prelude to the invasion of St. Lucia by the little army that Francis Lord Willoughby organised in 1664.

However, according to Douglas Taylor of Dominica, Hewanorra would be a corruption of Iouanálo- the Amerindian name for St. Lucia given by Père Raymond Breton in the 17th century. An intermediary form of the word, attributable to the Caribs themselves, says Taylor, was probably Hiwanárau. The original is thought to have meant: there where the iguana is found.
