The Law Made Simple!!!

FORFEITURE

What is 'forfeiture'?

'Forfeiture' is where a person loses some property, right, privilege or benefit in consequence of having done or omitted to do a certain act.

Certain Laws give to the Court, the power of forfeiture e.g. under the Criminal Code 2004, the Court may forfeit properties which have been used in the commission of a crime -thus, the weapon used in causing harm to another, may be forfeited by the Court.

Under the Drugs (Prevention of Misuse) Act, Cap 3.02 of the Laws of Saint Lucia, forfeited properties may be applied to the treatment and rehabilitation of persons addicted to controlled drugs of any description.

THE LIQUOR LICENCE ACT

The Liquor Licence Act is contained in Chapter 13.17 of the Laws of Saint Lucia.

What is the objective of the Act?

One of the objectives of the Act is to regulate the granting of licences for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

Why is there a need for a Law to regulate the sale of liquor?

The Act seeks to promote the following four objectives:

- the prevention of crime and disorder;
- public safety;
- the prevention of nuisance;
- the protection of minors/children from harm.

A nuisance is an act which interferes with the enjoyment of a right to which a person is entitled e.g. the right to the peaceful enjoyment of one's home. Thus, if on a place which holds a Liquor Licence, music is being played at such a level as to interfere with this right of peaceful enjoyment, this act may constitute a nuisance. Any person who believes his right is being adversely affected by the granting of a Liquor Licence, has the right to file an objection in the District court, to the granting or renewal of the said Licence.

Under the Act, liquor is not to be sold to any person who appears to the vendor to be under the age of 16 years.

Apple shows off redesigned iPhone

The revamped gadget has a stainless steel case, two cameras, improved display and is 24% thinner than the most recent version.

Apple boss Steve Jobs said the redesign was the "biggest leap" it had taken since the launch of the first iPhone.

But analysts said the phone's popularity could be dented by Apple's strict control over what owners can do with their gadget.

The gadget was revealed during the keynote speech at Apple's Worldwide Developers Conference in San Francisco.

The device will go on sale on 24 June. The US price for the 32GB model is $299 (£206) and $199 (£137) for the 16GB model. Apple said prices might be affected by contract conditions.

Some of the impact of the announcement was lessened because technology blog Gizmodo had published details of a prototype of the phone after one was left in a bar by an Apple employee. Acknowledging the leak, Mr Jobs said: "Some of you have already seen this."

The new handset includes many features that critics had said were lacking from previous versions.

It now includes two cameras - one on the front and one on the back - and allows people to video-chat, although only when it is connected to wi-fi. It also supports high-definition video.

Other extras added to the phone include a gyroscope which, when coupled with the existing accelerometer and compass, gives it six-axis motion sensing. This allows people to control games and apps by waving the handset.

"These phones are getting more and more intelligent about the world around them," said Mr Jobs.

Apple was forced to ask conference goers to stop using wi-fi to ensure that some demos of new features went smoothly. Mr Jobs said the 570 wi-fi hotspots in the room made it impossible to carry out some demos.

Mr Jobs also ran through changes made to the fourth release of the iPhone operating system, now called iOS. Apple previewed many of these features

The new handset has two cameras and allows users to video-chat

in April, including the ability to have more than one application running at one time.

Another change adds Bing as a search choice on the phone, although Google remains the default option, with Yahoo already available as a second choice.

According to research firm Gartner, Apple's iPhone now has around 15% of the smartphone market, behind Blackberry and market-leader Symbian.

Google's Android operating system has around 10% followed by Microsoft's Windows mobile with around 7% market share.

Despite Apple's position in the smartphone market, analysts warn of stiffer competition especially from nearby neighbours Google.

"The rise of Google Android over the last two years has been phenomenal and is allowing manufacturers to create appealing alternatives to the iPhone; critically at cheaper prices," said Adam Leach, principal analyst at Ovum.

"These handsets are more than just iPhone clones," he said.

"The risk to Apple is that these devices offer greater freedom with available content and may prove more appealing if it offers the right user and developer experience, than a device with Apple approved content only."

Lakers 91, Celtics 84: Derek Fisher rises again

It takes a lot to reduce Kobe Bryant into just another guy setting screens, but Derek Fisher managed to get it done.

After building up a 17-point lead in the second quarter of their critical Game 3 matchup against the Boston Celtics at TD Banknorth Garden Tuesday night, it seemed like the Lakers were headed to the sort of dominant road victory with the potential to define a series. After the break, however, the Celtics cranked up their defense and the Lakers responded by hoisting up jumpers and moving very little in space. The results were predictably ugly.

When Rajon Rondo went from his three point line untouched for a layup at the other end, the once large lead was down to one with 9:45 to play.

Normally, this would be the time for Bryant to step up and will his team to victory... except he was part of the problem. Stuck on the perimeter, forcing jumpers.

Enter Fisher. Throughout the regular season, Fisher had been trailed by so many shovel-toting fans and media tossing dirt on him, he might as well have been working the garden department at his local Home Depot. His response was always the same- absorbing the criticism, pointing to a team (generally) succeeding on the floor, and noting his moment would come. And this postseason, just as it was against the Magic last year, Fisher has again proven himself a wise, wise man.

Between the 8:56 and 4:33 marks of the fourth quarter, Fisher scored eight of his team's 10 points, including a pair of clutch jumpers coming off the 1-2 screen with Kobe setting the pick. He would cap the game with a tremendous full court drive off a Ray Allen missed triple (one of eight Game 2's hero would clank on the night), dropping the layup through as he was being crushed by three Celtics. His free throw iced it, and the Lakers, just as quickly as they gave away their home court advantage, grabbed it back.

Earlier in the day, much was made of an exchange between local newsman Jim Hill and Fisher, in which Fish delivered a death glare after Hill asked about Paul Pierce's ballyhooed (and totally overblown) in-game declaration that the series wouldn't be headed back to L.A. The intensity from Fisher showed Kobe isn't the only guy in town with an edge.

That was the intensity carrying him through the fourth.

Fisher's postgame interview on the floor with ESPN's Doris Burke showed too how willing he is to let the game face crack when it's over. "I'm sorry," he said, fighting back tears as the release of the in-game adrenaline hit him, "I'm getting emotional."

Who can blame him? The Lakers still had their defining win, now coming in a way perhaps more likely to galvanize the team than a walkover would have. Asked to what he ascribed his performance, Fisher's answer was outstandingly Fisheresque. "Faith. We work hard in this game, and sometimes things don't go your way, but you've just got to keep working hard and keep believing in yourself and in your team."

Even when people may not believe in you.

"I love this game, I love this team, I love this job, I love what I do," he continued. "Nothing means more to me than helping my team win."

Extracted from a book entitled St. Lucia: The romance of its place names (1966) by Rev. C. Jesse, FMI, MBE

Father Charles Jesse (1897-1985) was born in Dorset, England. He arrived in St. Lucia in 1928 and made significant contributions to the country, for example he wrote the lyrics of the national anthem.

COMMUNITIES/DISTRICTS OF SAINT LUCIA

KING GEORGE THE FIFTH PARK

The small park to the north east of Castries known as George the Fifth Park was formerly known as the Botanical Gardens. From 1886-1913, it appears to have been the principal agriculture station in the island. It was renamed after the death of King George the Fifth.

LABORIE

The village, bay and district known today as Laborie were called Islet à Caret by the early French colonists up to 1778 or so. Turtle Islet is the translation. The name was given, says Lefort de Latour, on account of a small islet that used to be visible in the bay and on account of the species of turtle called caret in French which used to abound there.

In 1788, as far as can be ascertained, the name Laborie took the place of Islet à Caret. It was the name of the French Governor of Saint Lucia- Baron de Laborie ( 1784-1789).

LA CLERY

The important suburb of Castries known as La Clery may owe its name to certain lady who owned property there in the 18th century Madame Clari. The name appears in the plan of the 1778-1779 campaign, but the plan was drawn up by the British. Perhaps Clari is a corruption of Clery. It is certain that an old plan of the Micoud Quarter (1771/1772) shows a Mr. Clery as owner of an estate on the right bank of the Trou Macé (sic) river. One may wonder, then, whether La Clery does not take its name from the family in question.

LA FARGUE

One may presume that the La Fargue district in the Choiseul Quarter takes its name from a family Lafargue. Breen lists Francis Lafargue as a vacant succession in 1831.

MABOUYA

The name Mabouya is of Amerindian origin. For the Caribs, according to du Tertre, maboya / mapoya meant evil spirit/gods.
